Nevada Operations Temporary Shutdown

As a precautionary measure and due to heightened security resulting from today's acts of terrorism, the U.S. Department of Energy's National Nuclear Security Administration Nevada Operations Office (NNSA/NV) has released from duty all non-essential employees.

While there is no eminent threat to Nevada Operations, the temporary shutdown is being implemented as a precautionary measure. The Nevada Support Facility in North Las Vegas, the Nevada Test Site, and other off-site locations will cease operations for today.

These actions are being taken at the direction of NNSA headquarters which has directed the closure of all NNSA operations across the country.

All employees are to report to work tomorrow as scheduled unless notified to take other actions.
